

With the recent rehabilitation of Baron Mandelson, Margaret Beckett and whispers that David Blunkett may well be another ex-Minister to be forgiven past mistakes and welcomed back into the fold, I wonder if Gordon Brown might be considering trying to find a place for Denis, later Baron Healey.

Brown has said that he has no time for novices like Milliband, so Healey at 91 years old certainly fits the bill. And he did go off to the IMF in the 1970's and ask for money when we had the last financial crisis under a Labour Government.

Cllr. Michael Dixon (Conservative)
St Chad's Ward